

Reporting your firm's diversity data

Updated 13 June 2025

- [What you need to know \[#7744\]](#)
- [Collecting data \[#5486\]](#)
- [Reporting data \[#reporting\]](#)
- [Publishing data \[#8215\]](#)

Firm diversity data requirements

All SRA-regulated firms, regardless of size, must collect, report and publish data about the diversity make-up of their workforce every two years.

Reporting your data in 2025

You need to report your diversity data to us by 4 July 2025.

report your diversity data now [\[https://forms.sra.org.uk/\]](https://forms.sra.org.uk/)

The diversity questions are available to view before you report so you can collect the relevant data from your staff. You can [find more information about the questions on our Q&A page \[/solicitors/resources/equality-diversity/q-a/\]](#), including changes to the question on sex.

When collecting your diversity data, please remember to organise it by the specified role categories. Read more in the collecting data tab.

If you need access to the data you reported to us in 2023, please [contact us \[/home/contact-us/\]](#).

Publishing your data

You must publish a summary of your firm's diversity data, but only if you can do so in a way that does not identify anyone. Read more in the Publishing data tab.

How we will use the data

We may use the information we collect from firms in the following ways:

- To update our [law firm diversity tool \[/solicitors/resources/equality-diversity/law-firm-diversity-tool/\]](#). So you can see the make-up of law firms across the sector.
- To inform our publications or engagement with people as part of our work to promote diversity in the profession.
- In our regulatory reform work to help us monitor the diversity impact of the changes we make.
- To help us meet our public sector equality duty, for example monitoring our decision-making by protected characteristics.
- To facilitate research and analysis by others.
- To meet reporting requirements to the Legal Services Board or the Ministry of Justice.

We will make sure that no-one can be identified from any data that we publish or share with others.

Read more about [privacy, data and information at the SRA \[/sra/how-we-work/privacy-data-information/\]](#).

If you have any questions please [contact us \[/home/contact-us/\]](#).

Collecting diversity data

The diversity questionnaire

Download a Microsoft Word version \(DOC 6 pages, 164KB\) [\[globalassets/documents/sra/equality-diversity/diversity-questionnaire-2025.docx\]](#) of the new questionnaire. This is an updated version of the questions and was published on 20 May 2025. There is a change to the monitoring question on sex.

You can find more information about the questions on our Q&A page [\[solicitors/resources/equality-diversity/q-a/\]](#), including changes to the question on sex.

Encourage your staff to complete the questionnaire

When you collect diversity data from people working at your firm please do not make assumptions about them. Everyone should be allowed to complete the questionnaire themselves.

Although you must give people an opportunity to respond, you cannot compel anyone to provide their diversity information. However, they may be more likely to take part if they understand they can choose 'prefer not to say' or submit no response at all for the questions they would rather not answer.

If you are a sole practitioner or small law firm you still need to submit your diversity data, even if you are the only person within the firm. If you are concerned about disclosing any personal information then please select 'prefer not to say'.

We hope you will encourage staff to share their diversity data. Here are some of the reasons why it is important – you may wish to use these when communicating with your staff:

- By sharing your diversity data with us, you help us understand the diverse backgrounds and experiences that make our firm unique.
- Having an understanding of the diversity of our staff helps understand what more we can do to make sure our firm is inclusive.
- We have a duty to encourage equality, diversity and inclusion in the profession and part of this is understanding the diversity make up of our firm.
- We share this data anonymously with the Solicitors Regulation Authority, so they can build an accurate picture of diversity across the legal profession – this helps inform their work to encourage a diverse profession.
- We want to support efforts to make the legal profession representative of the diverse public it serves.

Think about data protection before you start

Before you start you should tell people how the data will be used and who will have access to it. Read more about how we use the data on the what you need to know tab. Make sure you comply with the data protection legislation when you collect, store and process this information.

Please also remember that the data reported to us can be seen by all authorised signatories and organisation contacts for your firm.

You may prefer to collect the data on an anonymous basis. However, the information will be much more useful to you if it is linked to an individual, eg by reference to a confidential identification number. Then it can be used to monitor a range of employment activities over time such as promotion, pay rates, or recruitment practices.

People are more likely to provide information which can be traced back to them if you reassure them about confidentiality and tell them how your firm will keep their data secure.

Who should be included in the collection?

Everyone working at your firm is covered by the firm diversity data collection, not just solicitors. You should include:

- full-time and part-time employees
- employees on maternity leave or on long term sick leave (but only if they are in contact with the firm during their absence and are willing to respond)

- temporary employees, those on a secondment contract, consultants or other contracted staff working with you for three months or longer.

You should not include:

- people engaged in work which has been outsourced by the firm
- barristers or other experts engaged by the firm on individual matters
- people who are normally based outside England and Wales.

If someone works for more than one firm they must only complete one questionnaire. This should be for the firm where they do the majority of their work and spend most of their time.

Role categories

Everyone must be put into one of these role categories. Make sure your staff know which category they are in if you are conducting an anonymous survey.

If someone falls into more than one category, they should use the one which most accurately reflects their main role.

Please note that reference to solicitors includes registered foreign lawyers.

Full-equity solicitor partner/sole practitioner

Include here partners, members, directors and sole practitioners who are solicitors. Those holding these roles who are not solicitors should be recorded in the 'Managerial role' category below

Salaried or partial-equity solicitor partners

Partners, members or directors who are not solicitors should be recorded in the 'Managerial role' category below

Solicitor (not partner)

All other practising solicitors including assistant solicitors, associates or consultants

Other fee earning role

Includes fee earners such as trainee solicitors, CILEX members who are not Chartered Legal Executives (Fellows) or CILEX Practitioners and paralegals, ie, those who are not 'authorised persons'

(An 'authorised person' is a person who is authorised by one of the approved regulators to carry on the relevant activity (defined by the Legal Services Act 2007). Solicitors with a current practising certificate and registered foreign lawyers are 'authorised' by us.)

Role directly supporting a fee earner

Includes legal secretaries, administrators, legal assistants and non-fee earning paralegals

Managerial role

Includes non-lawyer partners, directors, or members and others such as practice managers, finance or account managers etc

IT/HR/other corporate services role

Includes non-managerial staff working in support services - including finance or accountancy roles

Barrister

People who are authorised by the Bar Standards Board

Chartered Legal Executive (Fellow)/CILEx Practitioner

People who are authorised by CILEx Regulation

Licensed Conveyancer

People who are authorised by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers

Patent or Trade Mark Attorney

People who are authorised by the Intellectual Property Regulation Board

Costs Lawyer

People who are authorised by the Costs Lawyer Standards Board

Notary

People who are authorised by the Master of the Faculties

Prefer not to say

Once you have collected your data, please [log into our reporting site \[https://forms.sra.org.uk/1\]](https://forms.sra.org.uk/1) to submit it.

If you have any further questions, please [contact us \[https://www.sra.org.uk/contact-us/\]](#).

Firm diversity data requirements

All SRA-regulated firms, regardless of size, have to collect, report and publish data about the diversity make-up of their workforce every two years (paragraph 1.5 of the Code of Conduct for Firms).

Reporting your data in 2025

You need to report your diversity data to us by 4 July 2025.

[report your diversity data now \[https://forms.sra.org.uk/\]](#)

Find more information about the questions on our [Q&A page \[https://www.sra.org.uk/solicitors/resources/equality-diversity/q-a/\]](#), including changes to the question on sex.

As well as reporting your diversity data you have collected, you will be asked about your plans for publishing a summary of this data. You can find out more information and top tips on this in the publishing data tab.

Video guide - Reporting your firm's diversity data

v

What you have to do

You must publish a summary of your firm's diversity data, so long as you comply with data protection legislation. It is important that firms consider carefully what information, if any, they can publish without identifying their staff.

Simply publishing your data submission in full may mean some individuals can be identified. See guidance below on when you should publish and how to publish information in an informative and accessible way.

You should publish your data as soon as you can after collection and keep it up to date.

[Open all \[#\]](#)

Where you should publish your data

Your diversity data should be made available to your staff and externally. Most firms will choose to publish on their website, but you can use alternative or additional publication methods such as:

- a poster in your office reception area and/or meeting rooms
- a summary included in your client care letters – but you should also make this available to your staff
- an article in your internal or external newsletter/bulletin.
- publishing on your intranet – but you should also find a way to make this available to clients
- in your recruitment information.

If you are publishing on your website, you should make it easy to find and understand. This could include:

- having a 'Diversity' link on your homepage with a specific page for diversity data
- illustrating the data using clear tables, diagrams or graphics and include a summary of what it shows.

Helping people to understand your data

For larger firms your data will be more meaningful if you provide some interpretation. For example, showing any trends, highlighting areas of underrepresentation and setting out any steps you are taking to promote diversity at the firm.

A much richer picture of your firm will be provided if you publish more detail. For example, the sex and ethnicity breakdown of your trainees or a diversity breakdown of your new partner appointments.

Here are some suggestions to help people understand your data:

- comparing your data to national or regional benchmarks and/or to the overall picture of diversity in law firms using the law firm diversity data tool [solicitors/resources/equality-diversity/law-firm-diversity-tool/]
- include prefer not to say responses – declaration rates are important for understanding firm culture
- publish your data by grade to show the diversity profile of your staff by seniority
- consider intersectional analysis of your data, for example, to understand the breakdown of your Black, Asian and minority ethnic staff by age or sex.

Being open with this information gives you an opportunity to highlight your firm's commitment to diversity. This could offer a competitive advantage in promoting your firm to clients and attracting the best talent to join you.

Examples of how you might present your data

Here are some examples of how to set out your diversity data. Please make sure that graphs and tables published online are accessible and can be easily read by those relying on assistive technology.

Staff ethnic breakdown with the roles reduced to three main categories and the ethnicity categories reported at the highest level

Breakdown by sex as a percentage of all staff with the roles reduced to six categories

Breakdown by sex as a percentage of all staff
Role category	Male	Female
Full equity solicitor partners	75%	25%
Salaried or partial equity solicitor partners	69%	31%
Solicitors	55%	45%
Other fee earners (eg. trainees, paralegals, legal execs)	41%	59%
Role directly supporting fee earner (eg. PAs)	12%	88%
Business services – Managerial	36%	64%
Business services – Support	38%	62%

Age distribution of employees across the whole firm

Trends data showing percentage of lawyers who are disabled between 2015 and 2021

Publishing your social mobility data

The Social Mobility Commission provides some helpful guidance about analysing and publishing social mobility data [https://socialmobilityworks.org/toolkit/measurement/].

The most useful indicator of socio-economic background is parental occupation, and this can be reported in three groups. This is the approach we use when reporting this data in the law firm diversity data tool [https://solicitors/resources/equality-diversity/law-firm-diversity-tool/]. Each group is made of multiple options from the response options in the questionnaire:

Response options in the diversity questionnaire	Socio-economic background
Modern professional & traditional professional occupations	Professional background
Senior, middle or junior managers or administrators
Clerical and intermediate occupations
Small business owners who employ less than 25 people	Intermediate background
Technical and craft occupations
Routine, semi-routine manual and service occupations	Lower socio-economic background
Long-term unemployed
Other	Exclude
Prefer not to say

Parental occupation at age 14

Data showing percentage of staff within each of the socio-economic background categories. National benchmark data for parental occupation is set out in the Social Mobility Commission's toolkit [https://socialmobility.independent-commission.uk/resources/the-building-blocks-an-employers-guide-to-improving-social-mobility-in-the-workplace/]. You could set your data out using charts similar to those used by the Social Mobility Commission as shown below.

The socio-economic background categories

The next most important data is the type of school you attended between the ages of 11 and 16. The question has two options for those who attended a state run or state funded school – you could publish these responses separately or together.

Type of school employee attended between the ages of 11 and 16

Benchmarking

To benchmark your data against national data sets or the wider law firm population, you can use the following data sources:

- for sex and ethnicity, see the government employment figures [https://www.ethnicity-facts-figures.service.gov.uk/work-pay-and-benefits/employment/employment/latest]
- for disability, see the department for work and pensions national employment figures [https://www.gov.uk/government/statistics/the-employment-of-disabled-people-2024/the-employment-of-disabled-people-2024]
- for sexual orientation, see data from the Office for National Statistics [https://www.ons.gov.uk/peoplepopulationandcommunity/culturalidentity/sexuality/bulletins/sexualidentityuk/2023]
- for social mobility, compare to the Social Mobility Commission's benchmarking for socio-economic background [https://socialmobility.independent-commission.uk/resources/the-building-blocks-an-employers-guide-to-improving-social-mobility-in-the-workplace/] and the government figures for school attended [https://explore-education-statistics.service.gov.uk/find-statistics/school-pupils-and-their-characteristics/2023-24].

When not to publish your data – complying with data protection

You should not publish your diversity data in a way that might identify individuals. Therefore, sole practitioners and very small firms may find they cannot publish their data at all. And firms of all sizes which only have a very small number of staff in a particular diversity category will need to think carefully about what they can publish.

It is good practice to publish a summary which covers all categories of the diversity data you collect. However, the risk of identifying individuals can be greater for some categories of data than others. You may wish to think carefully about if and how you can publish your data about:

- religion or belief
- sexual orientation
- gender identity/ trans status of your staff.

To minimise the risk of identifying individuals when numbers are small you could:

- publish the breakdown for the firm as a whole
- bring the Black, Asian, Mixed and Other categories together and compare this group with the White group
- merge role categories to show a high-level breakdown of the data, for example by partner, solicitors and support staff
- publish numbers relating to fewer than ten people as 'ten or fewer', although care needs to be taken to ensure that the actual number cannot be deduced from the other values given.

For more guidance about your obligations see the Code of Practice on publishing anonymous data from the Information Commissioner's Office [https://ico.org.uk/].